Dr. Rodika Manga is a project coordinator and education specialist with more than 25 years of experience in human rights, social inclusion, and civil society development. She has worked with the UNDP, UNICEF, UNFPA, the Council of Europe, Save the Children, and other international organizations.

Her experience spans project management—including planning, implementation, monitoring, and evaluation through the efficient mobilization and use of resources—as well as project development, grant writing, and grant assessment and management. Additionally, she specializes in empowering civil society organizations, mobilizing resources for educational advocacy, and building the capacity of professionals and duty-bearers.

Dr. Manga also brings direct experience in key thematic areas, including:

- Human Rights & Anti-Discrimination: Enhancing the institutional capacities of National Human Rights Institutions.
- Youth & Education: Providing entrepreneurship, financial literacy, and business leadership education for high school adolescents, while supporting youth activism focused on social cohesion, peacebuilding, and reconciliation.
- Child Rights & Inclusion: Advancing children's rights with a focus on quality education, inclusive education for children with disabilities and Roma/Egyptian children, early childhood care and development, and child rights governance.
- Gender & Protection: Promoting child protection, gender equity, and non-discrimination.

She holds a PhD in Inclusive Education for Children with Special Needs from the University of Tirana. At AIPA, she contributes expertise in project development, partnership coordination, monitoring and evaluation, with a focus on inclusive public services and rights-based approaches.
